INTERPRETING LINES OF QUESTIONING

Learn to form a non-fictional interactive narrative used to create the 'truth'—as it is seen from a particular orientation to a set of facts. It is essential that interpreters are aware of multiple factors behind the questions and possess the ability to generate accurate interpretations that conform to legal parameters and, to the extent possible, preserve the legal or investigatory strategy.

Sunday

9am - 12pm

ETHICS AND PRIVILEGE A JOURNEY TO OUR PROFESSIONAL SELF

By recognizing our own ethical guidelines and our privilege, we can then begin to understand and work with others who may have a different way of engaging ethics in their everyday work. This presentation will utilize the Demand-Control Schema framework and look into our role and space within our field, as deaf and as hearing interpreters.

OUTSIDE OF THE COURTROOM: IS IT LEGAL?

Determine legal areas within every day interpreting assignments and explore the relationship between a case in the court and any legally binding agreements outside of the court. Review legal terminologies and discuss choosing the best mode of interpretation for different aspects of assignments. Practice talking about our work with those who work in the legal arena.
